

EDITOR'S NOTE

This extra issue of the EALRGA Newsletter has been produced because of lack of space in the previous newsletter. We have a number of interesting articles on automation in the form of an outline of library automation in Japan and descriptions of two individual systems. Chinese-Japanese-Korean (CJK) library systems are under development, mainly for particular markets such as China, Taiwan, Singapore and Japan.

Materials collected for the Tiananmen Project at the Australian National University Library are of particular value for researchers and they continue to be listed in the newsletter.

We hope you will continue to submit news of yourselves, your library, your staff, your East Asian collections and their management. The newsletter depends on the sharing of information by members. Material can be supplied on floppy disc in ASCII text or Microsoft Word format, for Apple Macintosh or IBM-compatible (double density or high density), or in typewritten form. The next newsletter is due in May 1991, and the deadline is 30th April.
